

The Legend ended well if ...

... the medicinal herb is on the castle space, and ...
... the skral on the tower was defeated, and ...
... the castle was successfully defended.

With their combined powers, the heroes were able to take the skral's stronghold. The medicinal herb did its work as well, and King Brandur soon felt better. And yet, the heroes still felt troubled. The king's son, Prince Thorald, had not yet returned. What was keeping him so long? In the next Legend, you will find out.

The Legend ended badly if ...
... the medicinal herb is not in the castle space,
or ...
... the skral on the tower was not defeated, or ...
... the castle was not defended.

Tips for next time:

- Articles such as the falcon and telescope can be very helpful.
- Prince Thorald's extra strength can help in a battle against skrals.
- It is very important to find the witch quickly.
- To save time, it is sometimes better for one hero to get the entire reward in gold. Then just one hero has to get to the merchant.

Prince Thorald joins up with a scouting patrol with the intention of leaving for just a few days. But he is not to be seen again for quite a long time.

Prince Thorald is removed from the game.

Black shadows are moving in the moonlight. The rumors were right — the wardraks are coming!

Place wardraks on spaces 26 and 27.

If one of the spaces is already occupied by a creature, the new creature is moved along the arrow to the adjacent space.

A wardrak has 10 strength and 7 willpower points, and uses 2 black dice in battle (see creature display). Identical dice values are added up. If the wardrak has fewer than 7 willpower points, it only has 1 black die available. These creatures are especially dangerous, because they move twice each sunrise, 1 space each time (see sunrise box). For every wardrak defeated, the heroes get a reward of 6 gold or 6 willpower points, or any combination of the two adding up to 6. Defeated wardraks are placed on space 80.

Tip: To prepare for a collective battle against this powerful creature, calculate your collective strength points and place a star on a game board space with a number matching your total collective strength points.
